Dear Archbishop Krol,

In as few words as possible, I wish to call your attention to the following: It is known among the parishioners of St. Stanislaus Church, Lansdale, Pa., that one of our young priests, ordained only a few years, has been involved in a love affair (there is no better way to describe it than this) for the past three years that he has been in our parish. The name of this priest is Father Cudemo. The teen-age girl is a junior at our Lansdale Catholic High School.

What has made me write this letter is the many articles I have seen appear in publications, the latest being last week about the married priest from Bridgeport, Conn., who wants to open a house in Florida for other married priests.

I need not add that for the sake of his priesthood this young priest should be changed to some other assignment at some distance away, so that he will find it difficult to be in touch with the girl in question.

Sincerely yours,

Parishioner of St. Stanislaus Church
