

Rev. James Shanahan Transferred To New Castle Indiana

Rev. James Shanahan, assistant pastor at St. Paul's Catholic church in Tell City for the past nine years, received his orders from Archbishop Paul C. Schulte this week to assume new duties at St. Ann's church in New Castle, Ind. He must report for duty there next Friday, May 18.

He will be assistant to the Pastor, Rev. William Fehlinger and will also be in charge of the small mission church of St. Rose at Knightstown.

After Father Shanahan was ordained nine years ago he was sent to Tell City for his first assignment and has been here since that time. He has endeared himself to the members of St. Paul's because of his wonderful spirit of cooperation in all church and civic affairs, has been very active in sponsoring youth activities and many of the activities of the parish have been under his direct supervision.

Father is a splendid speaker and has been in demand as a speaker at many church and lay programs throughout the entire area. The members of St. Paul's learned with deep regret of his leaving but assure him of their best wishes for continued success in his new assignment.

A native of Rushville, Ind., which is only about twelve miles from his Mission church will give him an opportunity to visit often with his widowed mother, who lives at Rushville.

Father Paul Mattingly, ordained on May 3 at St. Meinrad has been appointed assistant pastor at St. Paul's and will probably arrive some time next week. He is a native of Indianapolis and a brother of Charles Mattingly who lives with his wife in the Parkview apartments.
